150 words

Shavonne Wong is a Singaporean new media artist whose work examines experiences we share but do not always have words for. She started in fashion and advertising photography, and over time her work shifted from constructing hyperreal digital images to creating interactive projects that ask people to recognize something in themselves rather than arrive at any clear answer. Her recent projects use AI, 3D rendering, and participatory frameworks to sit with the contradictions of how we live today.

Wong's work has been presented at ArtScience Museum Singapore, Art SG, Taipei Dangdai, Art Central Hong Kong, and the Venice Biennale. She was recognized in Forbes 30 Under 30 Asia (2020) and Prestige 40 Under 40 (2023), and has collaborated with Vogue Singapore, Bang & Olufsen, Marie Claire Arabia, and Shu Uemura. She is a co-founder of NFT Asia and a member of BLOOM. Lives and works between Singapore and Bangkok.

Shavonne Wong is a Singaporean new media artist whose work examines experiences we share but do not always have words for. She began in fashion and advertising photography, where she learned to construct images with precision and control, then moved into 3D rendering and synthetic human figures, and from there into interactive installations and participatory work using AI.

Her recent practice is interested in the conditions under which we extend trust to images and systems, and what we reveal in the process. In Meet Eva Here (2024-2025), thousands of people spoke with a synthetic character through gallery video calls and an online chatbot; those conversations were distilled into an archive of 100 public diary entries. In After Ophelia (2025), Wong traced how a figure who spoke fewer than 400 words in Hamlet has been buried under centuries of interpretation, connecting that history to the contemporary experience of being misdescribed online by AI summaries.

Wong's work has been presented at ArtScience Museum Singapore, Art SG, Taipei Dangdai, Art Central Hong Kong, and the Cameroon Pavilion at the 59th Venice Biennale - the Biennale's first NFT exhibition. Her 2021 project Love is Love, a generative exploration of identity, gained international recognition and entered the collection of Idris Elba. She has collaborated with Vogue Singapore (creating the magazine's first NFT cover), Bang & Olufsen, Marie Claire Arabia, and Shu Uemura.

She was named to Forbes 30 Under 30 Asia in the Arts category (2020), Prestige 40 Under 40 (2023), and was a TIMEPieces Artist (2022). In 2024 she won the top prize in Optimism's "We Love The Art" competition.

Wong is a co-founder of NFT Asia, a community dedicated to Asian artists in the NFT space, and a member of the artist collective BLOOM. She was a speaker at TED Singapore (2022) and has appeared on panels at Art SG, Taipei Dangdai, Art Central Hong Kong, Consensus 2024, and the World Economic Forum.

Born 1990, Singapore. Lives and works between Singapore and Bangkok.
